

Cherry Creek Stewardship Partners – 2009 Annual Conference

“Cherry Creek Times: Annual Update of Watershed Moments”

To be held Wednesday, November 4, 2009 @ The Wildlife Experience, @ Lincoln and Peoria

The focus for the conference this year is the important role of the annual conference in providing an update on ‘what’s happening’ in the watershed, including an informative session on Sustainable Drainage and what that term means in the basin; a session on Adaptability of basin fauna, flora, wildlife, and even Cherry Creek itself; and, as always, highlights of Active Stewardship on-going in the basin.

“Sustainability: In it for the long haul...”

The Partners actively promote the concept of ‘sustainable’ urban drainage, an approach where stormwater runoff is ‘on display’ in the natural drainageway corridor and not contained in a pipe; where improvements meet design life standards, maintainability, and regulatory goals; where retrofit opportunities are master planned; and where water quality and multi-use benefits are quantified. We will highlight several concepts of ‘sustainability’ on display in our watershed at this year’s conference.

“Adaptability: Design by Mother Nature...”

The Partners support better quality ‘home range’ as a benefit of stream projects, yet negative wildlife interactions are appearing in newspaper headlines more frequently as they attempt to adapt in the urban environment. Range Management strategies have an enormous effect on the success of re-vegetation, and assist the landscape in adapting to new impacts. Even Cherry Creek itself adapts to the conditions around it, as it carries its sediment load from the highest reaches of the watershed to the Reservoir. A photo essay documenting the benefits of enhanced riparian area brings our stabilization efforts into focus. At the conference, we’ll learn a little more about the geology, fauna, flora and wildlife of our Cherry Creek watershed as we hear about the dynamics of ‘adaptability’ in action.

“Active Stewardship: Take it Outside...”

The next time you enjoy a drainageway, greenway or park, think about the everyday open space heroes that worked together to bring their vision for the area to reality. They volunteer their time during cleanup or planting efforts, they form a stewardship group to meet a local need, they attend public planning meetings and voice opinions for their community space, and they simply pick up a piece of trash along the trail. Join us to hear about ‘active stewardship’, including a panel of local elected officials highlighting potential projects that are a result of the Cherry Creek Initiative Work Group efforts this past year.
